THE DESCENDANTS OF
JAMES AND LYDIA
MONTGOMERY

Compiled by
JOHN F. MONTGOMERY

1933

FOREWORD

A few years ago my cousin, Lee Montgomery, (No. 96), compiled a list of the descendants of James Montgomery for a genealogy of the Montgomery family about to be published by one of our Philadelphia kinsmen. The book, however, for some unexplained reason, never came out.

While residing in Washington, D C., last winter, I found an opportunity to make search for the ancestors of James Montgomery and his wife, Lydia, on the eastern shore of Maryland where I knew that James had been born. Accordingly I employed competent and trustworthy genealogists and we searched the records at Elkton, Baltimore and Annapolis for the desired data. After spending much time and money in going over all available records, we found convincing evidence but no absolute proof of James Montgomery's parentage.

At Elkton, we found the wills of John and Lydia Montgomery. Lydia's will shows a bequest of a substantial amount to a son James, to be paid to him upon his reaching the age of twenty-one, but gives the bulk of her estate consisting of lands in Bohemian Manor, inherited by her in a direct line from her ancestor Augustine Herman, to an older son, a half-brother of her son James. The will was probated in 1798, at which time our ancestor, James, was seventeen years of age. We know, from the autobiographies of Dr. Thomas J. Montgomery (No. 6) and Dr. John Montgomery (No. 5), sons of our James, that their father left Elkton after the deaths of his father and mother on account of unhappy family conditions (perhaps being unable to get along with his older brother, John) and went to Baltimore where he was apprenticed to a hatter and learned the trade; that, having completed his apprenticeship, he moved early in the 19th century to Danville, Kentucky, where he formed a partnership in business. If he had been the son of John and Lydia, he would have come into his bequest, upon his coming of age, which would have enabled him to move to Danville and to have put up his share of capital in the partnership.

We have some evidence from which we might infer that Lydia, the mother, was an Episcopalian or a Roman Catholic. We know that our James was a Methodist. The records of the Old Light Street Methodist Church of Baltimore show that one James Montgomery was a member in 1801. This is probably our James. It is possible that he changed his church denomination because the man to whom he was apprenticed and in whose house he probably lived, was a Methodist, or he may have found reasons for the change when he moved to Danville or married Lydia Johnson.

Dr. John Montgomery and Dr. Thomas J. Montgomery in their autobiographies state that their father, James, was a reticent man who talked but little about his family. In view also of James' unhappy relations with his older half-brother, of the fact that James' father and mother had been dead for more than ten years before James' marriage, and that James had for many years lived far from his birthplace and his brother, it is not strange that we have so little information about his family from him, or that such information as he gave his children, who were yet young at the time of his death, should have made but slight impression on their young minds.

Therefore, as matters stand, we have no positive proof that our James was the son of John and Lydia Montgomery, though the facts as found seem to indicate that he was their son. In the absence of such positive proof I did not pursue the investigation of the ancestors of John and Lydia further than to learn that John was probably born in Pennsylvania and that Lydia was a descendant of Augustine Herman to whom Lord Baltimore granted a very large tract of land in the Elk River district which has since been known as Bohemian Manor. I hesitate to claim kinship with so distinguished a family without more conclusive evidence of the fact, even though the genealogists tell me that the proof of our descent from Augustine Herman is such as would be deemed as sufficient by genealogists.

As for Lydia Johnson, we are able to find no record whatever. Our only information of her is found in the old family bible and the two autobiographies before mentioned, from which we learn that she came from Lancastershire, England, a short time before she married James. We could not find any marriage record, and do not know whether the marriage took place in Baltimore, as one version seems to indicate, or at Danville, as Dr. John Montgomery's account seems to imply. On the whole, it is clear that the marriage must have been either shortly before James moved to Danville or shortly after—probably shortly before. We have no positive knowledge of her parentage, but we did find mention in the Baltimore city directory of 1807, of a Joseph Johnson, a hatter. We thought of the possibility of his being Lydia Johnson's father and that James might have been apprenticed to him or employed by him in the trade. We could find no record of Joseph Johnson's family.

The genealogists give the opinion that our James was the son of John and Lydia and that the evidence not only supports that conclusion but is also quite as conclusive as we might hope to find in view of all the known circumstances. I think it highly probable that the genealogists are right, but I am greatly disappointed that the proof does not amount to a positive demonstration.

The biographies given in the inclosed genealogy are necessarily brief. We hope to have made no mistakes. We have, however, done the work more or less hurriedly, but, with the best intentions, and, if there be any mistakes, I hope that they will be overlooked.

I have included the names of only those living who have returned questionnaires, except, where the omission of a name would destroy continuity, in which case the name is listed.

For the sake of brevity we have used abbreviations wherever possible, for explanation of which see the "Legend." There is an index attached to the back which will enable you to find any name. The numbers given after the name are line numbers and will enable you to find anyone readily.

GENEALOGICAL HISTORY of the FAMILY OF MONTGOMERY

The earliest record we have of the Family of Montgomery, places its origin in the north of France, in the ninth century. Its history leads us up from the present, through an unbroken succession of ten centuries in length, to the first known of the name, Roger de Montgomerie, who was "Count of Montgomerie before the coming of Rollo" in 912. A native of Neustria himself, his ancestors were probably, for many generations back, natives of that province, which, when conquered by the Northmen, was afterwards known as Normandy.

Duke Rollo in his descent upon France with his army composed of the various nations of the North, and his seizure of one of her fairest provinces, did not supplant the native lords in their possessions by his own chiefs in every case. His army indeed had many Frenchmen and Englishmen among its number, as well as natives of all those Northern States who sent forth their countless roving bands, all known as Northmen. The dominion over the province that he fairly conquered from the King of France, was established and secured by the treaty which Charles the Simple only too gladly offered him. In the dissensions among his nobles, occasioned by that monarch's feeble reign, many of his northern and western lords may have welcomed Rollo when he sailed up the Seine and established himself at Rouen, hoping thereby to share in the spoils of an almost dismembered kingdom, which these adventurous strangers would know how to scatter, if they did not know how to secure.

The Montgomerys retained their hereditary possessions; and identifying themselves with the new and vigorous government of their native province, in a few generations became allied to the ducal house; and "jouent un rôle important dans l'histoire de Normandie"*.

Count Roger, who accompanied Duke William in his victorious invasion of England, had gone so far in his attachment to the descendants of the strangers of a century and a half before, as to lose sight of his own French ancestry, and claimed for himself a common ancestry with them. He "designated himself as 'Northmannus Northmannorum,' but for all practical purposes, Roger was a Frenchman of the Frenchmen, though he might not like to own it. This ancestral reminiscence must have resulted from some peculiar fancy; no Montgomery possessed or transmitted any memorials of his Norman progenitors"†.

The earlier generations of the Montgomerys took their surname from the early appanage of the family, the Country of Montgomery. This custom was common with all families dating back to that era, family names with but a few exceptions having a local derivation. The Country of Montgomery is situated in the Pays d'Auge, and consists of several baronies, and of about one hundred and fifty fiefs and arriere fiefs, dependent on the bailiwicks of Argentan, Caen, Alencon, and the Viscounty of Trau†. It remained in the eldest or French house, of which line its last male owner was William, Count of Ponthieu and Montgomerie, who died about the year 1221. The descendants of his daughter retained it for many generations, when about the year 1488, they parted with it. But in 1543 it came into the family again by its purchase by James Montgomerie, Seigneur de Lorges, whose father was of a junior branch of the Scotch house. The last Count of this line died in 1725.

The derivation of the name Montgomery can be but a matter of conjecture. It is suggested, however, by a writer§ who has made the derivation of proper names a study, to be a corruption of the Latin "Mons Gomeris," Gomer's Mount. Gomer (the son of Japhet), being the hereditary name of the Gauls, there was more than one locality in Europe bearing this designation. Eustace, in his "Classical Tour," mentions that not far from Loretto in Italy is a lofty hill called Monte Gomero, which was the ancient "cumerium promontorium;" and it is quite possible that a locality bearing a similar designation in Neustria, embraced within the hereditary estates of one family, should have conferred its name on its lords. This view of its derivation is confirmed by the name Mons Gomerici, being equally with Montgomery, applied by the English to the town in Wales subsequently named after Roger de Montgomerie, whose property it had become||. The spelling of the name has been various; Montgommeri and Mundegumbrie, were the most frequently used by the earlier generations; but later, Montgomerie was employed altogether until within a century, when many of the branches substituted Montgomery for that having the terminal ie.
